A sarcastic
canine commentary
on human life

Hi.

I live with you.

There seems to be some confusion.

I dug a hole in the garden.
I was looking for answers.
Also possibly moles.
It's what I do.

Love,
your backyard archaeologist

Went to the park. Rescued a struggling butterfly, fended off a charging stick, and stared down
two Rottweilers.

Love,
your slightly delusional, heroic pup

You snore. I fart.
We're even.

Love,
your flatulent roommate

You said, "Be calm." I saw pigeons, chips, and a tiny human holding ice cream. What you asked was impossible.

Love,
your frazzled street scout

You said "fetch."
I stared at you.
Then ran in a different direction.
Because I am my own dog.

Love,
*your creatively
independent thinker*

I started on my bed.
Then I moved to your bed.
Then I became your pillow.
It's called evolution.

Love,
your adaptable sleeper

Are we going to the park
or the kennel?
Blink once for fun,
twice for betrayal.

Love,
your deeply concerned pup

I may have greeted the guests too enthusiastically.
Sorry I took down Aunt Linda
like a rugby player.

*Love,
your touchdown champion*

You said, "Who's a clean boy now?" I peed on the bath mat in protest.

*Love,
your freshly rinsed rebel*

I heard the word "booster."
I assumed it meant a trampoline.
It did not.

Love,
*your emotionally scarred,
heartbroken acrobat*

You don't need a reason to be happy.
But if you need one,
I brought you a stick.

*Love,
your joy specialist*

Let go of guilt.
I peed in your shoe once. And look at me now — thriving.

Love,
your unapologetically evolved pup

Still here?

Clearly you understand commitment (and crumbs).

If these Notes made you laugh, snort, or nod in guilty recognition — there's plenty more canine "wisdom" where that came from.
